THE Data DINER

When a customer is notified that their Social Weight is low, they are encouraged to check out the Daily Dead. Here they can see the selection of data available for consumption. They can also make a dining reservation and check on their universal Social Weight.

As the customer enters the diner, they exchange their phones for the Social Chip. They are then taken to their table. Placing the Social Chip on the table top hub, an interactive menu appears on the placemat. The customer is able to choose from the Daily Dead, looking at starters, main dishes, sides, and desserts—all having different Social Values.

The waitress delivers the customer's selected items to their table. They are then able to consume at their own pace, taking in the stories, images, and even memes the deceased once digitally possessed. After their meal, customers recieve exchange the Social Chip for their phones and are able to see their gain in Social Weight instantly.
